

Online Ordering Upgrades

Following client feedback, we have completed a review of our online systems and a number of enhancements have now been implemented.

These changes do not affect the overall appearance or operation of our website, but rather are improvements in the various processes available to our users.

While most of the upgrades are subtle and do not require further explanation, some key changes include:

- The appearance of the first step in a new company order has been altered, and we have added a function to facilitate the duplication of data from any existing company record that your firm has previously ordered (or is in the process of ordering). Of course, any data duplicated using this function can subsequently be edited as required.
- The checks run by our Order Validator are now more comprehensive. One example is that all addresses provided for company registrations will be cross-referenced to Australia Post's records to ensure that suburb/city and postcode data matches.
- The complete details for any company, trust or SMSF party (i.e. officers, members and trustees) can now be viewed by hovering your mouse pointer over that party's name in the appropriate step of the ordering process. To edit a party's details, simply click on that party's name.
